

The Aurora Borealis:

The Aurora Borealis, also known as the Northern Lights, is a breathtaking, moving curtain of colors seen in the night sky. It is most likely to occur over northern lands such as Alaska, Norway and Siberia. Lucky observers have seen a magnificent spectrum...red, yellow, green, blue, and violet.

Auroras are created when highly-charged electrons from the solar wind interact with elements in the earth's atmosphere.

Written in honor of Lisa and Michael Carbonneau, who celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary with a trip to Alaska
